

NOMINATION OF JUDGE PARKER MAY TAKE PLACE THIS EVENING

Convention Will Adopt
Conservative Platform Today.

Porto Rican Delegates Are Seated, Philippines Refused.

Hon. Champ Clark of Missouri is Selected Permanent Chairman.

Short Morning Session Then an Adjournment to Enable Committees to Prepare Reports--Mr.
Bryan Will Submit Minority Report on Platform--A Big Ovation Given
Mr. Bryan.

Convention Hall, St. Louis, July 7.—It is a hard proposition to get the Ohio delegation bodily into the band wagon. Judge Parker's nomination has been a certainty since Tuesday morning and a clear majority of the Ohio delegation is for him, but the frivolous, divided minority seem bent upon destroying the state's influence in the convention. The nomination of Parker is probable at tonight's session.

J. H. NEWTON.

Convention Hall, St. Louis, July 7.—Crowds began flocking to the Coliseum early today to attend the second session of the national Democratic convention.

The reports of committees several of which have involved strenuous contests will be presented during the day, including the announcement of the proposed platform. When the latter is presented it will be accompanied by a minority report prepared by Mr. Bryan and a contest will follow.

At 10:12 a. m. the convention was called to order and Archbishop Glennon of St. Louis offered prayer, occupying one minute.

Thos. F. Grady, chairman of the rules committee, read the report at 10:20 and this was followed by a discussion of the status of the delegates from Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands.

The chair refused to recognize the gentleman from the Philippines on the ground that he is not a member of this convention. The convention favored the report of the committee seating the Porto Rico delegates. Thos. F. Grady said that the courts had decided that Porto Rico was a part of the United States.

"Once a part of the United States," he said, "it will never be a part of any other country." (loud applause) The supreme court of the United States, he continued, "has declared the Philippines not a part of the United States. It was for these reasons that the committee had taken the action it had."

Mr. Soutin (Ark.) contended that Porto Rico, the Philippines and Hawaii were all entitled to receive the same consideration.

Mr. Handy (De) took the stand to

THE NEW COLISEUM, ST. LOUIS, AND EIGHT FAMOUS DEMOCRATS.

The new Coliseum, scene of the Democratic national convention, has a seating capacity of nearly 11,000 and is said to be admirably arranged for great political gatherings. It is an immense brick building 318 feet long, 180 feet wide and 84 feet high.

On credentials was called upon to report.

Wm. J. Bryan takes the platform amid great applause. Judge Parker's daughter is on the platform, shaking hands with Bryan and the convention is applauding.

The reception being tendered Bryan is something remarkable and the applause grows greater every moment, delegates and visitors joining. All are on their feet.

The standard of states are gathering about Bryan and the excitement is intense equaling his nomination at Chicago. There is no let up in the enthusiasm for Bryan, which knows no bounds.

The Georgia delegation is waving Parker banners, and a Parker banner has just been taken to the front and argue the point, and when he said that the Democratic party hoped the Philippines would in time elect their own president, the convention cheered loudly.

To repeated interruptions Temporary Chairman John Sharp Williams, retorted: "When the Angel Gabriel shall stand on the top of the Mount and announce through his megaphone the crash of creation some one will still call 'louder.'

The committee on platform and credentials was not ready to report until this afternoon. The convention therefore adjourned until 2 o'clock.

David B. Hill officially handed Bryan the first knock out drop during the night when the Illinois contest was decided in the committee on credentials against the Harrison-Pryor forces and in favor of the Parker crowd under the leadership of John P. Hopkins. Mr. Bryan prepared a minority report but the Parker people declared there was no hope for Bryan on the floor of the convention in the contest.

The night was a busy one for the Nebraskan for he also had work to do in the committee on resolutions, of which he is a member. He received the second knock-out there, when his resolution to insert in the platform preamble a re-affirmation of the principles as set forth in the Democratic platform of 1900 was voted down with understanding that it would receive further consideration today.

New Jersey had a protracted session this morning and was late at the convention. It was finally decided to cast New Jersey's 24 votes for Parker. This decision had a strong tie, and the delegation reserved for itself the right to vote for Cleveland and the delegation sees an opportunity to do so. In view of the letter received by Senator Smith from Governor Cleveland, forbidding the use of his name under any circumstances the ex-president's name will not be formally presented.

BIG OVATION

Was Tendered Wm. J. Bryan at the Opening of the Convention Thursday Afternoon.

Convention Hall, St. Louis, July 7.—This afternoon the convention was proceeding with the utmost debate.

St. Louis, Mo., July 7.—The platform makers of the Democratic party are proceeding with the utmost debate.

St. Louis, Mo., July 7.—(Bulletin)—Hon.

Camp Clark of Missouri, has been selected as permanent chairman of the Democratic National convention. Senator J. W. Bailey of Texas and Representative Champ Clark of Missouri, both declined to accept the permanent chairmanship of the convention. Mr. Bailey, when informed of the election, said he could not accept as he desired to be on the floor when the platform is under discussion. He is expected to combat any attempt of the Bryan forces to inject into the platform planks which do not meet the approval of the committee. Mr. Clark declined because he had agreed to present the name of Senator Cockrell in nomination for the presidency, but as Cockrell's name will probably not be presented Mr. Clark accepted.

SPEECH

Delivered By Hon. Champ Clark As Permanent Chairman of the Democratic Convention.

St. Louis, July 7.—Hon. Champ Clark of Missouri, permanent chairman of the convention, said in part today:

"In his last King David said that all men are liars.

"Had he been in Chicago while Senator Henry Cabot Lodge was reading the Republican platform he would no doubt have pronounced the same opinion more leisurely, for surely there never was more mendacity packed into the same space in any document, purporting to be a grave state paper.

"Our contention is that the government shall be restored to the Democratic republican basis on which the fathers of the republic intended it to rest, and shall be made once more a government of the people, instead of a government of the classes by the classes for the classes.

"We insist: that exorbitant taxation shall be reduced to just and reasonable rates; that extravagance in appropriations shall cease, that economy shall prevail in all the transactions of the government; that all the departments shall be thoroughly in-

FIGHT

Between Forces in the Far East

RESULTS IN HEAVY LOSSES TO BOTH SIDES

Jap Casualties are Reported to Have Numbered 1000.

RUSSIANS LOST OVER 300 MEN

A Bulletin From Tokio Announces That a Japanese Cruiser Was Destroyed By a Mine.

London, July 7.—The Central News today reports a fight between Russian troops, under General Kaspatinsky and a force of Japanese near Lantyason. The Russians made a sudden attack in the darkness and during a heavy downpour of rain, on the Japanese outposts. The Japanese casualties are reported to have numbered 1000. Strong Japanese reinforcements came to the aid of the Japanese, but they were twice repelled. Finally the Japanese made a daring movement and the Russian party escaped being surrounded. Russian reinforcements then came up and the Cossack forces were enabled to retire. The Russian casualties were 300.

Another report of a battle, in which the Russians were commanded by General Koller is also made. It is apparently the same fight. The Russian casualties in the second report are given as 12 officers and 20 men killed and wounded.

SEVERE STORM

Puts the Newark-Zanesville Road Out of Business For a Few Hours.

Bridge at St. Louisville on the B. & O. Was Rendered Useless

Cattle Killed Near Johnstown--Man at Croton Rendered Unconscious--Rapid Rise at Utica--White Cottage Suffers Heavily from Cloud Burst--Heavy Downpour--Raccoon Creek Rising.

It is the general opinion that never in the history of Newark has there been such a rainfall in the same length of time as that which visited this vicinity Wednesday afternoon and night. The rain fell in torrents almost incessantly, and lightning and thunder were constant accompaniments of the downpour. At times too, there was high wind which did considerable damage.

The principal sufferer from damage will be the Newark and Zanesville Interurban road which was practically put out of business by the rain and lightning and it is hard to tell definitely when the schedules will be re-established from the nature of the difficulties.

The damage to the roadbed consists of two washouts at Irvine, two more near Zanesville, while or the Danz farm, where the long trestle work is located, a landslide occurred, which stopped all traffic over the trestle after 9 o'clock Wednesday night. A city street car from Zanesville was run out to the trestle and transferred the 26 passengers on the last car to the city. No cars on the traction line reached Zanesville after this hour.

Owing to the fact that heavy rains caused the creek to flood the diamond at the Y. M. C. A. grounds the Home League game that was to have been played Friday is postponed till July 15.

TELEPHONE TROUBLE.

The telephone people are having considerable trouble with their lines today on account of the storm, but gangs of men are busy getting the lines in perfect condition and everything will soon be in first-class order.

CATTLE KILLED BY STORM.

Johnstown, O., July 7.—The heavy rain, which began last evening, continued through the night and was accompanied by a brilliant electric display.

Three cattle belonging to Lawrence Shippert were killed by lightning while J. C. Beaumont lost one horse. A barn owned by W. C. Pierson was struck by lightning but was not destroyed.

RENDERED UNCONSCIOUS.

Croton, O., July 7.—Rain fell here in torrents last evening and the storm continued till this morning, but no serious damage is reported. Mr. B. H. Pinchey, ex-township clerk, while sitting on his porch here about five o'clock, was rendered unconscious by a bolt of lightning, but is all right today.

A RAPID RISE.

Utica, O., July 7.—The creek in this section is spread out over the fields and the lower part of Main street is flooded. The water came up faster this morning than was ever known here and the stream is still rising.

RAIN AT FLETCHER.

Fletcherville, July 7.—Last night's rain was followed this afternoon by another terrific downpour, which has done much damage, especially to hill corn-fields.

STORM AT GRANVILLE.

Granville, O., July 7.—One of the worst storms, and most severe in its effects that has visited this section for several years struck Granville Wednesday night. The streams were all饱满 in a short time, and by 5 o'clock today the waters of the Raccoon had overflowed the banks, and considerable damage was done the crops in the lowlands. Seven head of cattle were caught in the overflow near the old Columbus bridge, and

OFF FOR THE FRONT.

Night Departure From Tokyo of the Imperial Guard.

NO OTHER TROOPS SO POPULAR.

English Writer's Description of Their Spectacular March in Japan's Capital to the Railway Station. Thousands Cheered the Warriors and Carried Brilliant Lanterns.

A. G. Hale gives the following description, in the London News, of military Tokyo and of the departure for the seat of war of the Imperial guard:

All day long there had been signs of unusual stir and bustle in the Japanese capital. The quiet of the place was shaken, women were going to and fro with anxious faces as though an event of importance were about to occur. As the day wore away and the dusk of evening settled upon the city the pulse of the people began to throb more forcefully. I sent my interpreter to find out what was afoot. He came back at last with the news that at an early hour in the night the Imperial guard of Tokyo were to leave the city for the seat of war. Of all the troops known in the metropolis, perhaps none is so popular with the people as the Imperial guard, and I was to have an opportunity of watching a demonstration of a nature worth chronicling.

It was about 8 of the clock when the great sight began. The night had come on with sudden darkness, not a star lit the black mantle that overhung the world, there was no moon and the shadows cast by the dwellings in the quiet streets were scarce darker than the surrounding void. A magnetic calm had fallen upon the capital as if the people were gathering themselves together for one great patriotic effort. Suddenly the scene was changed. The tramp of armed men rang out upon the night. Short, sharp words of command, spoken, strangely enough, in the English tongue cut through the clank of falling footsteps, and then we knew that the Imperial guard was on its way to the forefront of the war. Then the people poured out of their homes as a river in the full of its flood pours over its banks. They came in rivulets; they came in torrents, and from every throat went up a shout of pride, a wild, shrill cry of welcome and farewell, and through the ever varying cadences of the human voices came the reverberating tramp of warriors' feet, and still the shadows lay upon the land.

It was weird, that march in the night, with the swelling cheers waking the echoes, the clank of arms, the shuffling footfalls of the populace and ever and anon a bugle's note. Then once again the scene was changed, 10,000 lanterns dashed into view, lanterns carried on bamboos by men and lads and boys; lanterns of every size and shape, lanterns pure white or blood red, lanterns green and gold, lanterns round, square and oblong—all carried high in the air above the heads of the marching men, and as the troops passed on each doorway opened wide and every doorway sent a man or boy, armed with a blazing circle of flame, to swell the throng, until the very air danced with a blaze of beauty. Banners held aloft in women's hands sparkled in the gorgeous gleaming folds of light, until the gazer's eye was dazzling by the rainbow hues that had sprung into being from the very womb of the night. Far up above the blackness lay unbroken; below, the earth was wrapped in shadows, while in between the earth and sky a blaze of brilliance lay. The lights shone down upon the hard, brown faces of the Imperial guard and dashed from rifle barrels carried proudly by men called forth to battle for a nation's honor.

The lights gleam ruddily on bold, unflinching eyes and faces fixed in the stern lines which duty carves and honor glorifies, and as my eyes ranged over that glittering mass, made up of men and women and warm, strong colored things, nothing looked to me so grand, so strong, so noble as the proud, calm faces of the Imperial guard fixed like flint.

Now the dense mass grows denser. From every alleyway and lane, from every street and highroad the people pour with lanterns held aloft a dozen feet above their heads. Then some one broke into song. A swift rush of voices followed as wave follows wave upon the coast. Women and children sang, men danced and tossed their lanterns high, boys clapped their hands and sent shrill treble sounds far out into the night. And yet above it all, above the babel of sound, above the cheering and the song came the stern, strong tread of the men who were marching to victory or to death.

They swing along with the measured stride of men who knew what marching meant, each man wrapped in his heavy jet black overcoat, his knapsack on his back, his bayonet by his side, his rifle on his shoulder, the yellow facings showing on each front. Steadily they moved amid that storming, swaying, fire-girt multitude until they reached the railway station; then, as if each soldier were part and parcel of a machine, they passed along the platform into their places. There was no hurry, no confusion, no shouting or storming—just a low word of command at intervals and prompt, unquestioning obedience, and every scat was filled by the man appointed to fill it, and in a moment, without a hitch or a blunder, the troops that were the pride of the capital flashed out into the night to cross steel with the gray clad men from the far-off north, while the women were left behind to weep and to work, to watch and to wait, as women must when war is loose in the land...

"NO HAT" CRUSADE.

English Physical Culturists Would Abolish Headgear Altogether.

At the meeting of the Leeds physical culturists the other day, in England, the honorable secretary, Mr. Harry Kremnitz, an engineer by profession, brought forward his proposal regarding the "no hat" crusade. He said he introduced this purely from a hygienic point of view and believed strongly that the continued use of headgear with little or no ventilation was detrimental to the growth of the hair, says the London Telegraph. It was also, to a great extent, an act of impolite notice into which we had fallen unconsciously. The use of hats should not only be discontinued in stuffy offices, warehouses, work rooms, theaters, libraries and public halls, but should be abolished altogether.

He (Mr. Kremnitz) had no doubt others had gone hatless for a considerable period before this proposal was made, but he now desired the physical culturists to set an example and to abolish their headgear entirely. He allowed, however, an exception should it pour with rain or in winter if it was very cold. A light hat might be worn as a protection. The present hat, no doubt, was a relic of olden times when helmets were worn to protect the head in battle. Could any one imagine a more unsightly and uncomfortable article than a top hat? He challenged anybody to bring forth a single advantage the top hat offered. The caps so universally worn were close, warm and heavy and impeded the growth of the hair. Young children's hair would grow strong in a very short time if their heads were left uncovered. There was no possible doubt that the fresh air admitted to the head prevented gray hairs and baldness. Mr. Kremnitz further urged the adoption of sandals in dry weather. These he particularly recommended for the use of the poorer classes, as he considered that bad and old wornout boots were a source of disease.

The proposal was seconded by Miss G. Perkin, and was generally indorsed, but in London, adds the correspondent, it is meeting with some show of opposition and ridicule.

GREAT OCEAN HIGHWAYS.

Panama Canal Will Create a New "World's Street of the Seas."

The completion of the new Panama canal will have some marked effects upon the great lanes of ocean travel.

Vessels have, to be sure, for years gone into Panama and Colon for the transhipment of their freight across the isthmus by rail. The effect of the opening of the new canal may be likened, says the London Mail, to that of the substitution of a strong bridge at a convenient place for crossing a river for a more or less uncertain ford. Such a bridge attracts wagon roads. The canal will draw toward it the commercial highways of the hemisphere.

Vessels which are operated by steam can pursue an almost unvarying line. Their managers accordingly prescribe courses between various ports, known as lanes, over which practically all the shipping moves. In case of a breakdown the vessel is much sooner "picked up" on a lane than in less frequent parts of the sea. Moreover, rocks, derelicts and other obstructions may be more carefully charted and watched on the highly traveled courses.

There is usually an east and west lane a few miles apart to lessen the danger of collision. Out of Duluth, on the great lakes, there is a four track lane, two for passenger steamers and two for freighters.

Although the oceans of the world have no visible streets or crossings or signposts, in the eye of the navigator they are thus very distinctly marked. No railroad train makes so direct a line between points as the steamship; no locomotive engineer knows more exactly where he is at all times than the sea captain.

Sailing vessels, responsive to winds, tides and currents, go about more at random, yet there are enormous areas of the sea where no sail or smokestack is ever seen. Even on the steamship lanes of the Pacific one seldom spies a vessel in a trip across that ocean. Nearing the Suez, however, from either approach and it will be the same with the isthmian canal, it seems as if the ships of the world were out on parade, so plentiful do they suddenly become.

Farm Machinery For Alaska.

A Seattle firm has received an order from Rampart, Alaska, for a mowing machine and a horse hayrake. This is said to be the first order of the kind that has ever come from western Alaska and appears to offer proof that the Land of the Midnight Sun has other resources than gold and fish, says the Portland Oregonian. The order for the machine came from a pack train operator who has spent seven years in the country and evidently knows what it is capable of. Western Alaska is too close to the arctic circle for very long summers, but the days are so long and warm that cereals and grasses are said to mature much quicker than in latitudes farther south. Farming may never become an industry of very great importance in Alaska, but as the country develops on other lines, there will be a demand for agricultural products which may make their culture even under adverse circumstances quite profitable.

War on the Linen Handkerchief.

Professor Calmette of the Pasteur Institute of Paris is making war on linen handkerchiefs, which he considers a great source of infection, says the Philadelphia Record. He suggests the use of specially constructed wallets for Japanese paper handkerchiefs, with separate divisions for the new and the used ones. The latter are to be burned.

Tancred bowed and murmured his greetings somewhat incoherently, for surprise had tied his tongue. Had he met her on Broadway he would have looked at her more than once, but finding such a girl at Yellow Flat fairly took away his breath.

"Won't you let me take away the bad taste of your ride with some tea?" she asked solicitously.

Tancred acquiesced heartily and seated himself near the dainty tea table where she was busying herself.

"Twenty-two," he told himself mentally, "and the finest eyes in America." In that half hour at the tea table Tancred fell in love, and having fallen in love, the object of his coming here intruded itself like a black cloud in the fair sky of his happiness. This girl was an heiress. It was this he had come to tell her. And Tancred, albeit a sturdy young lawyer, was by no means wealthy. He suddenly resolved to let the fortune remain in the background for a week at least. He would be unreservedly happy for that time, and then—"Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof," he told himself.

"Cousin Peter couldn't have left me much," said Miss Parsons.

"No," said Tancred, carrying out his resolution. "I'll go over the papers carefully, and in a week's time I think I can tell you the exact amount."

A week went by—two weeks—a month. Still the exact amount of Cousin Peter's legacy was not vouchsafed to Miss Parsons. She seemed to have found a rich legacy in her rides with Tancred across the brown plains and her talks with him before the library fire. Uncle Tapley looked on with happy approval.

"They're thoroughbreds—a fine pair," he told himself often and with much satisfaction.

It was at the end of the sixth week of his stay at the 4X ranch that Tancred after a night of sleepless agony resolved to terminate the pangs of conscience which were beginning to trouble him seriously. They had ridden that morning to a group of wells on the northern border of the ranch. The air was crisp and clear, and Miss Parsons, with eyes sparkling and cheeks aglow from the ride, was doubly charming.

Tancred's mind reverted to that afternoon when he had stood on the platform of the Yellow Flat station.

"I felt as if I were marooned," he told himself, "and I was marooned—in paradise."

He squared his shoulders and turned to the girl.

"I'm going back tomorrow," he said, with quiet force.

"Tomorrow?" The consternation in her voice set his heart thumping, but he went on calmly.

"Yes; tomorrow. You and I are very far apart." His voice had a note of sadness.

"Are we very far apart?" she said, looking away.

"Three hundred thousand dollars," he said.

"I—I don't think I understand you," she said, regarding him with wondering eyes.

"Cousin Peter is responsible," he observed.

"Oh!" she gasped. "Was it all that?"

"Yes," he said. "You understand, of course, why I go?"

She was silent. Her face was turned from him again. Presently he caught the sound of a sob.

"Miss Parsons—Gertrude!" he cried, and—such are resolutions—he put his arm about her.

"I'll give it away," she said, sobbing unrestrainedly on his shoulder.

And because of this, brown, bare Yellow Flat became the garden of Eden to Tancred, at least.

Three Poems.

Poems are of three kinds—magazine poems, tone poems and gowns.

Magazine poems have distinct raisons d'être. There is always unconscious idiocy seeking expression. Besides, the space between stories is often too large for a tail piece and too small for an illustration, whereupon it is a poem or nothing, and nothing, while it has its points of superiority, is typographically ineffective.

A tone poem is the Pierian spring escaping through a slide trombone, with any kind of a seat, at $5.

In the opinion of some sober critics gowns are quite as dithyrambic in form as they would be had Walt Whitman been a milliner. They follow no rule of construction further than that they look best on women who can least afford them.

Poem was originally a Greek word, meaning merely a thing made. A thing made to order is a later significance.—Life.

A Substitute For Images.

Members of the Greek church of Russia, where images are forbidden, have resorted to what an unfriendly critic has described as an ingenious evasion of an ecclesiastical prohibition. They do not carve a figure out of marble or shape it in bronze, but they paint the face, hands and perhaps the feet of a saint on wood and form the robes by means of metal work in relief. The nimbus of the saint is not infrequently enameled and in some cases the drapery is studded with precious stones, but bejeweled icons of any real value are not, as a rule, to be found in churches, though sometimes images are covered with glass to protect them from the kisses of those who come to pray before them.

Horse Stopped by Phonograph.

A runaway horse attached to a sewing machine wagon on the Park drive, in Philadelphia, was stopped a few days ago at the falls of Schuykill by a phonograph playing at the window of Samuel Mawhinney's residence, near the drive. The horse had run from Main street and Walnut lane, Manayunk, nearly two miles, when the phonograph sang out through a megaphone attachment the old song:

"Hey, Nellie! Ho, Nellie!

"Listen unto me!"

The horse, which happened to be a mare named Nellie, pricked up her ears and stopped. The driver, John Sherer, soon arrived and took charge of her.

TEACHERS IN TRAINING

How Chicago School Applicants Prepare For a Regulation.

STOUT AND SLENDER "GET BUSY."

From Massachusetts to Kansas Applicants For Positions Are Trying to "Make Good," Though in Far Different Ways—One Teacher Relies on High Heels to Aid Her.

"This may help some," sighed a tall, inordinately slender schoolteacher from Brookline, Mass., as she deived into a bowl of breakfast food with a big spoon.

"No, thank you. I'm taking only two meals a day," replied a short, excessively broad teacher from Kansas to an invitation to luncheon.

The tall, slim young woman from Brookline, Mass., is a candidate for a certificate to teach in the Chicago public schools. She is taking the examination being held at the West Division High school. The stout "miss" from Kansas is also taking the examination. And, like all the rural schoolteachers who came to Chicago to secure positions, they are in a quandary. They have just learned that the Chicago school board requires its teachers to be "of a proper weight, size and proportion, according to their several sizes, and in a good state of physical training," says the Chicago Tribune.

As soon as this requirement became known to them they set out to adjust their proportions. The tall, slender, pedagogical "timber" who are entered in the competition have put themselves on a "fattening diet," eating breakfast foods and taking a "tablespoonful every few hours" of cod liver oil.

The heavy, pedagogical "timber" are resorting to long walks, fasting, vigorous exercise and every known method of reducing weight.

All the candidates are determined to put themselves in "fine condition" physically before the examination, and in many a west side boarding-house midnight oil is burned while slender arms swing Indian clubs and dumbbells.

But the greatest fear in the hearts of the feminine candidates is not that they may fall short in any one or two of the qualifications, but that they may fail to secure classification among the "good specimens."

"I abhor being classed as a specimen, don't you?" asked one of the teachers of another yesterday.

"Oh, I don't mind that if I am classed as a good one," said the other.

One of the extremely short teachers was heard to remark that she intended to wear French needle shoes when her height was measured, but a cruel examiner dispelled her hope by explaining that the height of the heel is always measured.

The scheme of putting shot in the pocket to increase weight has been suggested also, but it, too, will fail, as the weight of the teachers is taken minus the weight of the clothes.

TIBETAN PRAYING WHEEL.

Grownome Articles Used by the Natives In Their Devotions.

"To the Yellow God, the Black God, the White God and the Green God—Please kindly take us all up with you and do not leave us unprotected, but destroy our enemies." Such a prayer is to be found on a Tibetan praying wheel, said Mr. A. R. Wright at a meeting of the Folklore society held in London. A novel feature of this prayer wheel, which the Tibetan spends much of the time in turning, is that it turned the wrong way everything done before was undone, says the London Mail.

Some of the articles used by the Tibetans in their devotions are very gaudy. A human thigh bone covered with human skin is used as a horn for exorcising demons and to draw the soul from hell. A double drum made from two halves of a skull, the skin covering being that of a human being, is placed on the altar of certain fiend deities in the Tibetan religion.

THIS YEAR AND LAST.

The receipts and expenditures for the fiscal year ending June 30 have not been made public, but it is estimated by the Journal of Commerce the June receipts will reduce the deficit to $51,228,766. This estimate was made about the middle of the month.

The Journal of Commerce says that on this date last year the current surplus for the fiscal year amounted to $40,616,347. For the current year to June 5 receipts from customs amounted to $242,862,737, against $266,204,268 for the corresponding period last year.

Internal revenue receipts amounted to $214,442,977, against $213,256,719 last year.

Miscellaneous receipts amounted to $43,073,592, against $39,772,212, and receipts from all sources amounted to $500,379,306, against $519,233,199 for the same period last year.

The total expenditures for the current year amount to $551,602,071, against $478,616,853 for the same period last year.

The receipts from customs have fallen behind those of last year ever since the beginning of the present fiscal year.

From this it seems—if the figures prove to be correct—that there is a difference against the government of about one hundred million dollars, counting receipts and expenditures.

The people may well ask, what's the trouble? These great Republican financiers seem to have slipped a cog somewhere.

Notwithstanding the terrific downpour of rain in Newark and throughout the county Wednesday night which caused streams to leave their banks and produced serious washouts on two roads, Pataskala managed to keep it out of the wet. The "drys" won by a majority of 75.

Pertinent Sentences From John Sharp Williams' Speech

"The most important quadrennial event in the world is the election by the American people of their chief executive."

"The temporary chairman (Root) in his address hoped to have the country lose sight of the fact that the Republican party is a party whose only precept is a shipwreck drawn from the gamblers' table: 'Stand Pat.'"

"Our fellow citizen in the White House has found but three great men who have filled the seat he now occupies worthy of praise—George Washington, Abraham Lincoln and himself."

"If there ever was a determination carried out it was the determination of the Republicans to see that nobody should investigate the alleged culprits in the post office department, except their colleagues."

"The Republican platform is chiefly a boast that the Republican party is responsible for everything good which has happened."

"With three exceptions the Republicans of the house of representatives at the last session voted against instructing the secretary of state not to enter into contract with 'trusts and unlawful combinations.'

"Mr. Root tells us that the fatal 14th day of September, 1901, marked no change of 'policy,' but who is there in America who does not know better?"

"The sole hope of the Republican party today is that the average man, during periods of prosperity, will let a dishonest government continue uninterrupted."

"Dewey, Schley and Miles are Democrats. The Republican administration snubbed the first, tried to disgrace the second and insulted the third."

"But for the Democratic senators and representatives the Republicans would doubtless be furnishing today, in the case of Cuba, a companion piece to the picture exhibited in the Philippines."

"During Cleveland's administration Attorney-General Harmon won a suit against the Trans-Missouri Freight association and others, the principle of which gave life to the proceedings against the Northern Securities company."

"The boasts that the administration has executed the anti-trust laws is ridiculous."

"A more ridiculous piece of official impotency than the interstate commerce commission at present does not exist."

"Will any sane man say that 'public interest' has not already demanded alterations in the tariff."

"From 1861 down to the outbreak of the civil war the country was nine-tenths of the time under Democratic ascendancy, with Democratic tariff legislation, and nine-tenths of that time our people were prosperous beyond all precedent."

"It was not the 'miseries of Cuba,' but public demand that led the Republican party to fall in line. Democrats voted for the war measure as enthusiastically as Republicans. Not the Republican party, but the people of America fought the 'quick, victorious war with Spain.'

"The acute reaction which we call panic," he said, "was inevitably approaching. Even before Mr. Cleveland was elected, 'business was sunk in the depression' which preceded the panic of 1893."

"What partnership is this between God, human industry and ingenuity and the Republican party, of which the Republican party is the self-assertive senior member? What monumental effrontry is this, which enables them to boast of the benefits of the increased volume of standard metallic money and consequent prosperity by the operation of 'the quantitative theory of money,' which theory they found no language strong enough to deny and ridicule but yesterday?"

"A Democratic president, such as he whom we shall nominate, will devote himself to the faithful execution of the laws of the United States, as they are written, without executive construction or usurpation."

"Republicans say that the law will make the corporations 'able to pay' higher wages. Who is going to intercede with the Almighty to make them willing to do it?"

"Does not everybody, who knows anything, know that the Republican party has no idea of making any alterations in the tariff, unless they can thereby purchase the support of additional special interests, or tie to them already bought special interests by yet closer bonds?"

"One of the chairmen of the Republican convention says it has joined the beef trust." The injunction does not seem to have had any practical effect upon the beef trust or upon the price of beefsteak."

"It (the Democratic party) will not falter when it comes to declaring for a reduction of tariff taxation on trust-produced articles to the point where foreign competition may enter the American market, whenever combines seeking monopoly raise their prices to the American consumer to the point of extortion, nor will it falter in declaring for reduction where American concerns habitually charge American consumers higher prices than those charged foreigners for identical articles. It will come out flat footed for amicable rather than retaliatory trade relations with the other nations of the world, especially for generous reciprocity with Canada."

"General Joe Wheeler was more in evidence at San Juan than the Strenuous himself and Joe Wheeler was a Democrat."

"The Democracy when entrusted with power, will construct the Panama canal, speedily, honestly and economically."

"Under a Democratic administration the rights of labor will be recognized as no less 'vested' no less 'sacred,' no less 'inalienable' than the rights of capital, and both will be dealt with justly and impartially, according to their every right."

"A Democratic president, such as he whom we shall nominate, will devote himself to the faithful execution of the laws of the United States as they are written, without executive construction or usurpation."

"Let us erect a standard to which all good men may repair."

helm. The Citizen has made marked progress in the newspaper field and now mechanical and other improvements are to give it further prestige.

The shortest legal argument on record was made the other day at Battle Creek, Mich. A well-known character about town was upon trial for the theft of a whip from a farmer's buggy. His attorney made a long speech, contending that he had merely borrowed the whip to kill a rat. Then the prosecuting attorney arose, looked at the jury, uttered the one word, "Rats!" and sat down. That was enough. The jury returned a verdict of guilty without leaving their seats.

SUNKEN TREASURE.

The Bullion That Went Down In Vigo Bay 300 Years Ago.

An Italian company has been formed to recover bullion sunk in Vigo bay 300 years ago. It has found one of the old galleons at the very outset of its search, an anchor, a chain and some cannon having been brought up as evidence. The salvors have hopes of raising the vessel bodily and removing the contents at leisure. Vigo, a town in northwest Spain, has figured at least four times in the annals of English war. In 1589, the year after the invincible armada, Sir Francis Drake and Sir John Norris wound up an expedition to Portugal by capturing Vigo, burning the city and ravaging the country. It was in 1702, however, in the fighting days of Queen Anne, that the great "affair" occurred. As an old line has it, "in 1702 brave Cokee did strew the depths of Vigo bay with gold."

War had been declared with France, and Sir George Cokee, who had distinguished himself at La Hogue and afterward took Gibraltar while in command of the united British and Dutch squadrons, received information that Spanish galleons richly laden were then anchored at Vigo. On arriving there he found that the commander of the French escort had protected his convoy by placing them behind an enormous boom formed of masts, yards, chains, cables and casks, but, undeterred, the Torbay, under Vice Admiral Hopson, crashed through, to be very nearly destroyed, however, by a fire ship. It is said that the latter still had its cargo, which consisted of snuff, aboard, and when it blew up the snuff prevented the flames from making headway.

A complete victory was gained by the allied fleet. According to some accounts five galleons were among the prizes, which had on board 20,000,000 pieces of eight, besides merchandise of equal value. Of the silver fourteen millions were saved, and of the goods about five millions. Four millions of plate were destroyed, with ten of merchandise, and about two millions in silver and five in gold were brought away conjointly by the British and Dutch.

Kid Skin Evening Waistcoat.

Pacemakers in the fashion world may cease cudgeling their dome of thought now that the kidskin waistcoat has appeared for evening dress. Exclusive haberdashers in Manhattan whose trade includes leaders of style among the younger society coteries have been engaged recently in concrete thinking in order to evolve something brand new in the waistcoat line for midsummer wear. White suede kidskin has finally been adopted to fill this aching void.

Of course this novelty is fresh from "dear old Lunnon."

The ideal clock for a camper's lodge is one that swings from the wall, but occupies not more than 6 by 4 inches of wall space. The face of the clock is little more than two inches in diameter, but is covered with a convex glass which magnifies the figures on the dial until they can be seen clearly at long range.

These clocks come in leather mountings of all colors. In some of them the figures on the dial are magnified until they seem an inch or more in size, but they can be seen only when the camper looks squarely at the clock face. Viewed from the side they become invisible.

The newest thing in cooking apparatus is a combination stove that would make the homemaker in a Harlem flat sit up and take notice. On one small cooker can be boiled at once eggs and coffee, while on a lower tier bacon or chops can be broiled. And the whole thing is not more than a foot high.

The frame is of nickel or brass, and at the base is an alcohol lamp with a flame surface of two and one-half inches.

Above this is the perforated broiler, and on the next tier is a deep kettle or cooker. Fitted into this is a folding tray with three holes for eggs to be set in endwise. This compartment is filled with water, and dipping deep into it is a cylinder with a fine wire net bottom like the inside of a French drip coffee pot. This is suspended from the frame and holds the coffee.

The eggs are literally boiled in the coffee, and the two cook in about the same time.

PIQUA TEAM

Comes to Newark For a Three-Game Series With the Idle-wilde Boys.

The Piqua team which by many is considered the best in Ohio, is scheduled for games with the Idle-wilde team today, Friday and Saturday.

The "Fast Blacks," have a hard hitting and speedy aggregation, the pitching staff being headed by "Roaring Bill" Kennedy, late of the Pittsburgh champions. Robertson and Howard are the other twirlers of the Piqua team who are the peers of any pitchers in the state.

LANCASTER

Won From Newark Wednesday 6 To 5 —The Idle-wilde Boys Made Only Eight Errors.

Lancaster, O., July 7.—The Idle-wilde team of Newark, piled up almost as many errors behind Nel Mason's pitching Wednesday, as they made hits off Teddy Purcell, late of the Wheeling Central League team. Only five hits were made off Mason, who deserved to win his game. Umpire Tarpey's work was decidedly off color his decisions giving the visitors all the worst of it.

The score: R. H. E.

NEWARK BOY A HERO

Jesse Armstrong and Companion Save Two Chicago Ladies Who Would Have Perished in a Storm Near Pike's Peak But for Their Timely Aid.

Jesse B. Armstrong, son of Mr. B. F. Armstrong, of this city, and formerly in the employ of the Newark Western Union Telegraph office, who is now in charge of the telegraph office at Pike's Peak, Colo., 14,147 feet above the sea level, sends The Advocate the following account of "Life Saving on Pike's Peak":

Pike's Peak, Colo., July 6.—While the people of Newark are sweltering under a July sun I am up here "high and dry," nearly three miles above the sea level, with snow banked up high about the station and the atmosphere so thin that one has to breathe four times to get a breath.

We had a rather thrilling experience not long ago at life saving on the summit and, thinking The Advocate readers may be interested in the narrative, I send it herewith.

Three of us, Cullen, Robison and myself, the entire "force" at the Peak, had just turned out the lights and turned in to forget a storm that was raging outside. The wind was blowing as I had never heard it on the Peak and the snow was falling thick and fast. We heard a noise at the door and a man's voice feebly crying, "Let me in, for God's sake. I have—" That is as far as he got, for an instant later a man aged about 70 fell unconscious to the floor as I opened the door.

Cullen yelled for me to come to his assistance and help him get the man to where we could work with him. I think it took something like forty-five minutes to bring him back to consciousness. When he had partaken of some coffee, after we had refused him brandy, which is worse than anything else as a stimulant on Pike's, he started to say something to us which we could not understand. At last he spoke with a clear voice, but as if we were not with him: "Oh, God! please spare my two daughters tonight in this storm, and oh, God! please spare them strength to reach this house of shelter."

We were amazed at him and went after him to get the meaning of what he said and see if he was in his right mind. He then told us that his two daughters and himself had left Marion at 6:45 that morning for a walk and that they had kept walking, thinking they would try to "do" the Peak, and that night had overtaken them. The storm had come up so quickly that he was numbed with the cold from the blizzard before he would listen to leaving his daughters and come on to the Peak for aid. He said they were down below us about one mile and were helpless and lying beside the track in a large snow drift. We questioned him a little to make sure he was in his right senses, as we didn't like to go out in such a storm unless we were needed, and ascertain if they would be apt to "hit the trail" back. He said they would never undertake to start back, as they couldn't unless they rolled down hill. He kept begging us to hurry and get started, and all the time we were getting into some heavy clothes to protect us from the storm, and try and save them from what we knew to be sure death if they were left there very long in such a storm. I spoke to Cullen, who was my nearest chum and always ready to undertake anything I would, to come get his overcoat on and come with me.

I do not speak solely for the roads that I represent but from the standpoint of a citizen, I am frank to say that I voice the sentiment of the entire community of law-abiding people of Newark, all of whom are loud in their praise of you as a mayor, and a good many would not be as frank to express themselves to you as they would others."

Hail had begun to fall and the wind was now blowing over the Peak at the rate of about 50 miles an hour. We were then on our way, but had gone no more than 10 or 15 yards before we found it was not going to be an easy task to bring two helpless women up a 25 per cent grade in such a storm. The wind had frozen the snow where it had melted and made running very difficult. We thought we would take to the snow drift which lined either side of the track 12 or 15 feet high. We had no sooner reached the top of the drift before we were knocked down by the strong wind. But nothing daunted, we got to our feet as quickly as we could and, bearing off to our right, where the snow was not so deep, and where the wind couldn't get at us so, we started again on a dead run down the mountain. As we drew near the curve, which is a mile from the summit, we saw two ladies about 35 years each lying face downward in the snow. When we reached them they asked us in a feeble voice if we were walking down, and I replied that we had come

A HOLD UP STORY

In Which the Sum of 37 Cents Figures—Riley Arrested With Others for Train Jumping Accuses Joseph McManus With Robbing Him—Police News.

J. E. Riley, Joseph McManus, and Lewis Johns were arrested by B. & O. Detectives Bennett and Foreman, charged with train riding.

A story developed of a bold holdup on a D. & C. freight train near Black Hand, in which Riley says he was the victim and an affidavit was filed by him before Mayor Cilly charging McManus with the crime, in which the booty secured was 37 cents.

Riley, who appears to be honest in the matter told a thrilling story of the holdup, part of which was corroborated by the detectives. He was on his way to Zanesville and got in a box car on B. & O. freight train 36. There were four other men in the car, and when near Black Hand, Riley says he was set upon by McManus and others.

McManus he says, pulled a gun and forced Riley to give up 37 cents. In fear of his life from the threats made by McManus, Riley grabbed the pistol and a desperate struggle for its possession ensued until Black Hand was reached when Riley broke for the door and jumped from the train. He notified the telegraph operator who wired the detectives who were on board the train, and they received the message at Pleasant Valley. Riley getting on the second section of 36 as it went through Black Hand.

As soon as the detectives got the message they went to the car and placed the four men under arrest, but two of them made their escape. Several shots were fired after them but they got away. McManus and Johns were taken to Zanesville and then brought to Newark.

The trial of McManus was set for Friday morning. Both he and Johns were fined $5 and costs which will keep them until the case can be further investigated. Riley will be held as a witness.

TOOK BADGE FOR A JOKE.

Harry Robinson and John Galagher were arrested for stealing a policeman's badge and mace, the charge being preferred by officer John Scott. Galagher pleaded guilty but exonerated Robinson, who was discharged.

It seems that the young men had gone to the police station to take some tobacco for the prisoners, and Galagher was left alone in the front office. He said he took the articles as a joke, which cost him $5 and costs.

STAHL PLEADED GUILTY.

Robert Stahl was arraigned on a charge of stealing a diamond stud valued at $12 from Rev Laird. He pleaded guilty and was fined $12 and costs and sentenced to 10 days in the county jail.

WITH A SHOT GUN

Marion Varner Committed Suicide at His Home South of Black Hand—Dead Body Was Found by Mr. Varner's Mother Wednesday Afternoon.

Marion Varner, single and aged about forty years, who resided with his parents, aged 85 and 90 years, three miles south of Black Hand, suicided on Wednesday afternoon by firing a heavy load of shot from a double barrel shotgun into his left breast. The deceased had been troubled with migraine for some time, and was crippled in one leg, having been afflicted with spinal trouble in his early days. Of late he has been quite despondent.

Wednesday morning he got up at a very early hour and seemed very fidgety, imagining that the sheriff was after him. He walked up and down the road in front of his home all the morning and during the noon hour. After dinner his mother went out into the raspberry patch, a short distance from the house, when he was still continuing his monotonous walk. About 1:30 o'clock, while Mrs. Varner was picking berries, she heard the report of a gun from the direction of the house. Thinking something was wrong she dropped her berry buckets and hurried to the house and commenced an investigation. Upon looking into the woodshed she was horrified to see her son lying on the ground dead, with the blood gushing from a horrible wound in his left breast directly over his heart, and with a double barrel shotgun lying by his side. She immediately gave the alarm, and a physician was summoned, but there was no need of his services as the vital spark had fled.

When found Varner was in a sitting position and everything had the appearance of his having committed suicide. A small stick was lying on the ground by the side of the gun, with which he had evidently pushed the trigger which fired the shot that blotted out his life.

Coroner Leggs of Newark was immediately notified of the tragedy, and taking the first interurban car was soon at the scene of the tragedy. He viewed the remains and will hold an inquest Thursday afternoon, although he is of the opinion that it is a clear case of suicide.

The deceased was a man who was

HARRY P. SCOTT

MADE NO APPLICATION FOR A STAY OF EXECUTION.

Will Go To Cincinnati and Accompany the U. S. Marshal To Co-lumbus Prison.

An erroneous impression was created in Newark in regard to the Harry P. Scott case by the publication in a Newark evening paper that Mr. Scott and his attorney, C. W. Miller, had gone to Cincinnati with a view of making a last attempt to secure a stay of execution of his 13 months sentence in the penitentiary. The item was published also in a Columbus morning paper. The writer must have given vent to his imagination as no such attempt was made and the case is in statu quo. The mandate of the court ordering the sentence to take effect was issued Thursday afternoon, and Mr. Scott will go to Cincinnati and surrender himself to the U. S. Marshal and will begin his sentence Friday in the Ohio penitentiary.

As a matter of fact a stay of execution could have been secured but was not desired by Mr. Scott or his friends, and the trip to Columbus was made by him and Attorney Miller, merely to consult with their advisors in that city.

A species of natural soap tree is found in Japan, China and India. By using water of alcohol the saponaceous ingredient of the fruit is extracted. The soap possessing no alkaline qualities is claimed to be superior to the ordinary soap of commerce.

With two exceptions there have been no young men elected to the office of vice president of the United States. These two exceptions were John C. Breckinridge, who was 36 when he became vice president, and Theodore Roosevelt, who was 43.

The male human needs more food than the female. The man tends to expend more energy and the woman to store it up in the form of fat; he burns the faster.

POCKETBOOK

Was Not Lost After All—The Excited Woman Had Simply Put It "In a New Place"

A middle-aged woman on a Buckeye Lake car between Hebron and Columbus, created a great deal of merriment several days ago, although she was entirely unconscious of that fact as she was deeply in earnest in what she said and did.

She informed the conductor and a heavy-set man who appeared to be an acquaintance, that she had lost her pocketbook containing all her money, although she had her mileage.

Suddenly her face brightened and she whispered to the woman sitting in the same seat with her in a tone loud enough for everyone closeby to hear:

"It's all right, I know where it is. I put it in a new place this morning, and forgot about it."

No one was vouchsafed where the "new place" was, but everyone was glad her trouble was so satisfactorily adjusted.

WEDDINGS

LUPHER-LYNCH.

Thursday morning at 8 o'clock at the home of Mr. Frank Fitzgibbon on Hudson avenue, Mr. Preston Lupher, president of the Logan Natural Gas and Fuel Company, was joined in marriage to Miss Grace Lynch of this city.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. L. C. Sparks in the presence of only a few invited relatives and friends.

After a wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Lupher will make their home in Columbus.

The groom is a well-known and prosperous business man, having large interests in the gas fields in Central Ohio, while the bride for several years has been one of the bookkeepers of the company at Newark.

They have the best wishes of many friends here for a prosperous and happy life.

Mr. and Mrs. Lupher's wedding trip will include a visit to the Eastern cities to be followed by an ocean voyage to St. John's, Newfoundland, returning via the St. Lawrence and Great Lakes.

MURPHY-MINGER.

Thursday morning at 7 o'clock at the St. Francis de Sales church, Mr. Daniel Murphy and Miss Mary Minger were married, the ceremony being performed in the presence of a number of friends. The couple were attended by Mr. Frank and Miss Catherine Minger, brother and sister of the bride.

After a short wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Murphy will live on North Fourth street.

Mr. Murphy is one of the best-known mail carriers at the local office and his bride is a most estimable woman.

NICHOLS-SPENCER.

Dr. Edwin Nichols, one of Newark's best-known physicians, was married at noon Wednesday to Miss Olive Spencer, the ceremony taking place at the home of the bride in Dresden.

There were a number of guests at the wedding including Mrs. Mary Nichols and Miss Vera Nichols, mother and sister of the groom, and his nieces, Misses Margaret and Mary Nichols, all of Newark.

After a wedding dinner, Dr. and Mrs. Nichols left for a wedding trip to St. Louis, and upon their return will live in Newark. Miss Spencer is a bright and popular young woman who has many Newark friends. She was graduated from the Newark high school recently.
